

From: Dominic Dupuis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/29/01 9:51pm
Subject: DOJ vs Microsoft

Bonjour,

All I have to say is that I don't understand how you can leave Microsoft give away (I mean, distribute) is software to schools as part of the penalty phase. This situation will only help them to extend her monopoly.

I applaud Microsoft for raising the idea of helping poorer schools but I don't think that the remedy should be a mechanism by which Microsoft can further extend is actual monopoly.

By providing schools with a software choice, Microsoft may provide many more computers to these schools. This could also help them to show that they truly serious about helping American schools.

You should take a look at the Red Hat proposal, this could be a better solution than the Microsoft settlement offer.

Thanks

---

Dominic Dupuis B.Sc. CNE
ddupuis@myrealbox.com
<http://ddupuis.webhop.org>